- Lots of mowing and wildlife food-plotting going on; Randy likes his turkeys!
- Sweet corn harvest is complete. Friends and family waded through the wind-damaged field; the quality of the sweet corn was excellent despite challenging growing conditions.
- Lots of field-walking the last couple of weeks. Yields are probably better than they should be given the summer, but we will probably be as much as 40 bushels below last year's corn averages. Soybeans certainly look good and we have high hopes for yields!
- HOT and MUGGY! Temperatures near 100 degrees with air you can drink!

Iowa

- HOT! It is tough to say how much the heat is affecting corn. Most of our corn was early-planted, so it should withstand this blast of heat well.
- A rain would be welcome although there is adequate moisture and the crop is not suffering.
- There are areas in Iowa where corn is being chopped due to poorer yields.
- We are getting all of our pre-season items ready for harvest!

Ohio

- Two inches of rain fell just before release of this round of the VCT!
- We participated in the Pro Farmer national tour and got to see a lot of Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois crops.
- Statewide we saw a lot of variability in corn yields (with similar circumstances in IN and IL too). There were some big yields being recorded along the survey trail.
- We still feel good about strong yield potential on the farm!

- Wheat crop is harvested. We are astounded by the wheat yield. Earlier pictures in the VCT showed short growth that made it seem like an insurance claim was certain... we were wrong! Rains came at just the right time!
- We are pictured below planting sugar beets into wheat stubble as a cover crop.
- Once cover crops are planted we will spread manure over the same fields.
- Our expectations are still extremely high for the fall!
